

FM 90.5 KLove Radio, Albuquerque Metro Area

KLove is a key radio station we listen to with national and international news of interest to the communities around us – news about international missionaries to pray for, news events from a Christian perspective, etc. All music is of the Christian genre, servicing around 100,000 customers across the Albuquerque area.

Klove is able to pool funds nationwide and cost-effectively reach the nation through its translators to deliver news/music consistently across the nation and abroad – New Mexico could not financially afford such quality programs through LPFM without shared cost across statelines. If radio stations like KLove are displaced by LPFM, we'd lose a non-commercial, 24-hour radio station with fair and balanced news in this area – I believe we only have around 4 non-commercial stations in the area, including NPR.

It is of highest public interest for radios with KLove's business model and translator capability to reach poorer states/areas like New Mexico and offer this quality of content – without this, we would not be able to afford it.
